Hilariously early. Already built.

Hustle Fund makes its first investment at the pre-seed stage, writes a first check of $150,000, and is comfortable setting terms. Its sweet spot is a company that has built at least a minimum viable product.

OwnVoice Studio is past that bar. The pipeline is built, and it has already produced a complete audiobook in the founder's own voice. What it needs now is its first check.

STAGE	Pre-seed, first institutional round

Most books never become audiobooks.

- Most authors cannot afford studio narration.
- They do not want their book read by a stranger or a generic synthetic voice.
- Recording a full audiobook themselves takes many hours of studio time they do not have.
- So most books never become audiobooks at all.

US audiobook sales reached $2.43 billion in 2025, up 9%. AI narration accounted for just 0.03% of those sales. The market is built on hired voices; the author's own voice is the missing product.

An audiobook in the author's own voice.

OwnVoice Studio turns an author's manuscript into an audiobook in the author's own voice.

01

Consent-first voice intake

Your voice is recorded and used only with your consent, given first and on the record.

Pronunciation review

You review pronunciation and approve it before production begins.

3

Built, and proven on a real book.

The pipeline is built and proven end to end on a real book: the founder's own novel, The Descent of the Watchers, produced in house in his own voice.

THE MARKET ALTERNATIVE

On ACX, SAG-AFTRA-qualifying narration starts at $250 per finished hour, for narration only. Retail-ready production commonly runs about $400 per finished hour, all in. OwnVoice charges $200 per finished hour with production included, in the author's own voice.

Every author is a potential customer.

3,529,980 self-published titles were registered in the United States in 2025 alone, up 38.7% in one year, and most never become audiobooks. The global audiobook market was $11.0 billion in 2025 and is projected to reach $58.5 billion by 2033. If every new self-published title were produced at our typical price, that is about $6.4 billion a year of production value, before a single traditionally published book is counted.

Every figure on this slide is simple multiplication of the studio's published per-book prices.

Franklin Onikan

FOUNDER AND CEO

An author himself: he needed an audiobook of his own novel and built this studio to produce it in his own voice. OwnVoice Studio is that proven pipeline, turned into a product for every author.

What the capital unlocks

Every dollar goes to developing OwnVoice Studio. The plan runs in three stages, in order.

STAGE ONE

Complete and Launch

Finish the product, pass real-device testing, launch the app on the App Store and Google Play, and produce the first paying authors' books on the proven pipeline.

STAGE TWO

Launch with Capacity

Dedicated voice production capacity so books produce in parallel, quality control and pronunciation review support, and a public launch that onboards the first cohort of authors.

STAGE THREE

Global Scale

Production in additional languages, sustained outreach to authors worldwide, and the operating capacity to produce books continuously.

Forward outlook: these stages are plans, not promises. Each stage begins when the prior stage is complete and as capital allows.

13 THE ASK

We invite Hustle Fund to write the first check.

OwnVoice Studio is raising pre-seed capital to finish the author-facing product and open paid production. We invite Hustle Fund to write the first check of $150,000 and set the terms of the round, alongside co-investors who complete it.
